

dove

dove began with our coat polo. after we designed the shirt, the pleats across its front and back reminded us of feathers. we found the name in a detail that was already part of the garment.

we had not originally planned crunk denim for this collection. the pairing came later: the two pieces worked so well together that we decided to release them together. we introduced both as new products alongside returning pieces from our earlier drops.

after building our catalog around oversized clothing, we are moving toward a slimmer fit for the first time. with dove, we wanted to introduce that direction through two pieces that work together, without replacing the oversized garments we have released so far.

we used a 50% cotton, 50% Eco Modal blend for the coat polo, our first cotton-blend product. its feather-like pleats on both sides gave us the starting point for this collection. crunk denim marks another first for us: our first use of selvedge denim.

we officially released dove on september 18, 2026 at 5 pm eastern. we offered the coat polo and crunk denim as preorders, along with the returning assortment. our fatik shorts were available as premade pieces.

for us, dove is a first step into a different fit and new materials, not a complete departure from what came before. we are bringing a new silhouette into our catalog, led by the way the polo and denim work together.
